Oh na na, what happens to pop music writing these days? Where have all the real words gone? Instead of pop with substance, we have pop with rom-pum-pum-pums. And, when there is substance, it is clouded with high ideals packaged as art(pop). No nuance, but there are only a few artists really nailing the whole songwriting thing — and even then their words are either inarticulate or passable as an emo away message. Fortunately, an industry-created band of five has an album coming out that is rumored to revive the art of pop songwriting. Early reviews of One Direction's Four have praised the boys for maturity. But what are they growing away from? Hallmark-like lyrics, that's what. To prove that point, we've dug through Hallmark's collection of emotions and 1D's discography for pieces of prose that can go either way because they've all got it one thing. And, that one thing is saccharine's words. Some may be signed, sealed, delivered while others are belted by Mr. Harry Styles & co. See for yourself! This is just the best quiz. Picture: Corbis/VCG/Corbis/Getty Images Grunge music isn't just about wearing flannel and being depressed. The first grunge sound came out of Seattle in the mid-1980s, but it certainly gained popularity in the early and mid-1990s. This subgenre of rock music was a sensation. Bands like Nirvana, Pearl Jam, Soundgarden and Stone Temple Pilots broke through and showed the world that there was a type of rock music that wasn't necessarily metal and wasn't necessarily psychedelic. This alternate sound resonated with outcasts of the 90s, and it changed the way we see music. Rock was no longer a fusion of country, blues and electronics. It was a pure sound that was not always perfect but always made a difference. The lyrics to these new sounds attacked society more than they targeted the government, as some previous decades of music had. It was about looking at yourself and understanding who you were. It tackled topics of self-understanding, bullying and inequality. No doubt, grunge changed the sound of music for an entire generation, and for good reason. The music was clean, the song was passionate and the lyrics poetry. It was so popular that the genre lasted over a decade with fans spanning the globe. If you think you are one of the grunge bands, try to identify these grunge songs from the lyrics we give you. While these texts seem to be too much emotion for some, emo kids in the early 2000s loved it! Emo bands like Green Day, Blink-182 and Jimmy Eat World appeared in the late 1990s and early 1990s, but the new millennium brought in new bands like My Chemical Romance, Panic! at Disco and The Used. The songs had really expressive lyrics, but only a true emo kid can complete these lyrics. While many people may not be aware of where emo came from, it stands for emotional or emotive rock. And before we get to the music that the kids played on repeat, the music and musicians also triggered a fashion statement. The emo fashion would often include choppy stock hairstyles, dark eyeliner and a variety of clothing options from Hot Topic. The perfect outfit couldn't be complete without a pair of black Chuck Taylors to write your favorite lyrics on. Emo kids wrote the lyrics to the early 1986 band, Green Day.
